Article 1

General

Permitted shipments

- The minimum dimensions are 10 cm (longest side) x 1 cm (shortest side) x 10 cm (other sides), and the maximum dimensions are 175 cm (longest side) x 58 cm (shortest side) x 78 cm (other sides).
The maximum dimensions for Shipments that can be delivered to a PostNL Parcel and Letter Machine are 61 cm (longest side) x 41 cm (shortest side) x 52.5 cm (other sides). The maximum weight per parcel is 31.5 kg.
- For Shipments larger than 100 cm (longest side) x 58 cm (shortest side) x 70 cm (other side) and/or between 23 kg and 31.5 kg, a surcharge for non-standard processing will be applied.
- Surcharges will be applied to Shipments larger than 50 dm³. These surcharges depend on the parcel size and apply from 50 dm³, 100 dm³, and 200 dm³.
- A "Heavy Parcel Label" provided by PostNL needs to be stuck on Shipments weighing >23 kg (or suspected to weigh more). The label must be visible on four sides of the parcel.
- A Shipment within the Netherlands and Belgium can consist of multiple separate parcels. A parcel must consist of one box, bag, or tube and may not consist of multiple separate parcels taped together
- Shipments requiring cooling are not permitted.
- Parcels must be properly packaged.

Guidelines for proper packaging

- Use an outer packaging as and where necessary and choose sufficiently sturdy material that is not harmful to other parcels (e.g. wood or metal).
- Packaging is considered to be sturdy if it can withstand all wear and tear that occur during transport as well as all weather conditions and cannot be opened without leaving traces.
- Use an opaque, neutral packaging for valuable items.
- Make sure that the packaging is securely sealed, preferably with tape.
- Avoid pressure points (e.g., legs, corners, protrusions) and empty space. Distribute the weight evenly, e.g. by using filling material, which will also prevent the product from sliding.
- For fragile goods, it is advisable to apply a material buffer between the wall of the packaging and the product.
- Contact PostNL for advice on proper packaging.

Delivery time

- Delivery time is the time between the acceptance scan of the parcel at PostNL and the first delivery attempt to the Addressee. The Addressee can be a business, private individual, or a P.O. Box address (in the Netherlands).
- PostNL targets a delivery time on the next delivery day for parcels destined for the Netherlands and Belgium (see Table 2).
- Parcels addressed to an address on the Wadden Islands or a P.O. Box address (even if a reply number is linked to a P.O. Box) will not be delivered on Mondays.
- The time slot indication provided by the Addressee in their profile is taken into account as much as possible. However, indicated delivery deadlines are for information only. PostNL accepts no liability for the non-observance of the deadlines.

Change in Service frameworks

PostNL has the right to unilaterally amend and/or add to these Service frameworks. If PostNL does so, it shall notify customers with a Contract in writing (including email) at least thirty (30) calendar days before the amendment and/or addition comes into effect. Words written in uppercase shall have the meaning given to them in these Service frameworks or the General terms and conditions for Freight transport.

Packaging

PostNL is happy to assist you to ensure your parcels are delivered smoothly. Special PostNL roll containers are available for this purpose. These roll containers can be used to prepare your batch of parcels for shipping. Other use is not allowed. PostNL may charge fees for this service. See also Annex 5 General terms and conditions regarding the use of tools.

Batches

To prevent a delay in the delivery time of batches, we request a pre-notification of at least five days:

- Batches of parcels in excess of 1000 pieces with destination NL.

Pre-notification

A correct pre-notification is essential for the quality and delivery time that PostNL targets. All Shipments must therefore be pre-notified by the Sender using one of the PostNL applications or integrations (see Table 1). Including the Addressee's email address in the pre-notification contributes significantly to the quality and delivery time. If the Addressee's email address is known, it should always be included in the pre-notification. PostNL accepts no liability for services rendered incorrectly if there is no pre-notification or if such pre-notification is not on time or incorrect. The additional steps for parcels that are incorrectly notified if at all increase the costs of a parcel. A "Not pre-notified" surcharge is applied. PostNL has a retention period of seven days for pre-notification. Parcels handed over after this period will be treated as not pre-notified, and the "Not pre-notified" surcharge will be duly applied. Inadequate quality of the barcode on the label may result in additional costs and delays in delivery time. In case of doubt, you can always have it tested.

Track & Trace

All your shipments can be traced via www.postnl.be. Here you can also view the Addressee signature where applicable. You have access to your personal Track & Trace information via mijn.postnl.nl

Track & Trace is intended exclusively to inform you about your Shipments. Track & Trace information must not be used for other (commercial) purposes. It is moreover possible to obtain Track & Trace information through our applications and integrations. Use this link for this. The use and retrieval of information about your Shipments are limited to the combination of your customer number, customer code, and API key linked to your contract. Track & Trace information is and remains PostNL's property. This is shared with you to show the status of your Shipments in the PostNL process. Sharing these data with third parties is authorised only if they relate to an integrator or logistics partner with whom you have a shipping contract for PostNL parcels, both physically and via a technical integration. If you share (access to) said data with a party other than as mentioned above, PostNL reserves the right to terminate this Track & Trace service.

Notifications

Email notifications to the Addressee's email address you provided inform the Addressee proactively about the status of your Shipment. Email notifications are sent by PostNL by default.

A correct and complete pre-notification, including the Addressee's email address, is essential for sending notifications. It is therefore necessary to include the Addressee's email address (if known) in all cases of pre-notification of a Shipment so that PostNL can send email notifications

Send applications and integrations

All parcels, pallets or general cargo must be provided with a shipping label in accordance with PostNL's specifications. PostNL offers applications and integrations for retrieving delivery options, receiving Track & Trace information, pre-notification of Shipments and creating labels (see Table 1).

Table 1 - Overview of PostNL applications and integrations

Application	Description
Deli	This is the web self-service environment where customers are able to arrange and view their Shipment and service-related matters.
Application Programming Interface ("API")	Customers can use the PostNL API to integrate the PostNL services into their systems through programming.
Plug-ins	A plug-in developed by PostNL is a ready-made module that can be installed on e-commerce software, allowing customers to quickly and easily use PostNL services.
sFTP	sFTP is an obsolete technique to exchange files via a (secure) server. sFTP connections are being phased out. A reasonable period of time will be used between the initial announcement and the actual discontinuation. Implementing new integrations via sFTP is not possible. New services and data solutions will not be offered via sFTP.
Business app	This is the mobile self-service environment where customers are able to arrange and view their Shipment and service-related matters.

Note In exceptional cases, labels can be generated using the customer's own application and not using a PostNL application or integration. In this case the customer receives instructions to make the labels. The customer uses its own software to generate the labels and this functionality runs entirely locally at the customer. The labels must first be physically tested and approved by PostNL before they can be put into use.

Please note: this is not a PostNL application, integration or service. The customer is responsible for keeping the labels up-to-date. This option is only available for specific cases and needs to be coordinated with PostNL. To be sure of suitable labels, a label requested with a PostNL application or integration must be used.

Use of applications and integrations

You are responsible for correctly implementing the applications and integrations. To guarantee the continuity of our applications and integrations, it is necessary that you consult and use the most recent (technical) documentation included in the developer portal.

Use of an integrated service that may interfere with other users, endanger the operation of the website and/or affect the information on the website or the underlying software is not permitted.

PostNL reserves the right to discontinue applications and/or integrations, or functionalities and versions of applications and/or integrations. A reasonable period will be observed between the initial announcement and implementation. If you use an application or integration that is not (or no longer) supported, PostNL reserves the right to deny you access to the application or a certain functionality (or functionalities) within the application and no longer to accept pre-notifications and/or labels or to charge surcharges.

PostNL ensures adequate security of applications and integrations, but cannot guarantee flawless or uninterrupted operation.

Further development, upgrades and updates

PostNL applications and integrations can be improved and expanded with new products and functionalities. PostNL expects users to carry out updates regularly in order to keep up with the most recent versions of the applications and integrations. Users may be required to upgrade or switch in case of a modification. Failure to do so within the period specified by PostNL may result in the inability to use the relevant applications and/or integrations.

Use of data

Although PostNL aims to provide accurate, complete, and up-to-date information, PostNL cannot explicitly or implicitly guarantee that the information provided with an application or integration is accurate, complete or up-to-date.

You may not use data that PostNL makes available with applications and integrations for commercial, non-technical purposes, including mass downloads of content, creating a database, big data or providing the data to third parties for analytical purposes.

You are expected to make maximum effort to comply with the delivery preferences as indicated by the Addressee. You must adequately secure the data provided by PostNL and may only use this data for the purpose of completing and fulfilling the relevant order.

If the data comprises personal data, you must ensure that you use this personal data only in accordance with the General Data Protection Regulation and related laws and regulations (including Code Email 2012).

Use of PostNL logo, icons, and buttons

You must use the data made available by PostNL for applications and integrations (such as the PostNL logo, icons, and various buttons) unchanged. These items remain PostNL's property and are copyright-protected. Use thereof must be immediately stopped if PostNL has made such a request, and all related content (text, banners, images) must be removed at once.

PostNL Liability

PostNL cannot accept any liability for direct and/or indirect, immaterial, or consequential damage, including lost profits, arising in any way out of but not limited to (I) defects, viruses, or other imperfections in equipment and other software in connection with accessing or using the applications and/or integrations, (II) the information provided on or via the applications and/or integrations, (III) the interception, modification, or improper use of information sent to PostNL or to you, (IV) the operation or unavailability of the applications and/or integrations, (V) misuse of the applications and/or integrations, (VI) loss of data, (VII) downloading or using software made available via the applications and/or integrations, or (VIII) claims from third parties relating to the use of applications and/or integrations. You indemnify PostNL against any claims from third parties (including Addressees) relating to the use of the applications and/or integrations.
